

Inside Australia's Body Farm

This month we are delighted to present Professor Shari Forbes, a forensic chemist and director of the AFTER facility. Shari has spent her life trying to capture the smell of death. A much-published researcher on the science of forensic taphonomy and the rate of human decay and decomposition.

In 2016, Shari established Australia's first and only human body farm in the outskirts of Sydney. The AFTER facility provides a valuable resource for researchers and police to assist with missing persons and homicide investigations.
